This afternoon, President Obama is kicking off the final stretch of the Vote 2010 campaign with a rally in Madison, Wisconsin -- and it all starts at 6:30 p.m. Eastern Time. But it isn't just a message for Madison. With just five weeks until Election Day, the President is going to be making the case for moving America forward as clearly, as forcefully, and as passionately as he ever has.

You won't want to miss it. We'll be live-streaming the rally in its entirety -- including a performance by musical guest, Ben Harper.

Sign up for a reminder to watch it live.

Over the next 35 days, the President is hoping you'll take the Moving America Forward message with you as you knock on doors, make phone calls, and talk to voters.

Dozens of key races are going to come down to the wire -- and it's going to be the work you do that makes the difference.

To keep the Republicans from taking control of Congress, we're looking to turn up the volume across the country. And it starts with President Obama's rally later today.

Tune in live at 6:30 p.m. Eastern: <http://my.barackobama.com/MadisonLive>

Thanks, Mitch

P.S. -- Great news: Yesterday the President signed into law a bill that will go a long way to providing relief for thousands of small businesses across the country -- offering new tax cuts and making it easier for these businesses to get the loans they need.
